

Under Cover

How to Manage Young Forests and Shrublands for Wildlife

Young forests and shrublands are essential to wildlife like the familiar American woodcock, but also lesser known animals like the New England cottontail.

Please join our workshop to:

- learn about the diversity of wildlife that need young forests and shrublands;
- learn how to manage your woods, fields, and wetlands;
- visit a local site that has actively managed for wildlife; and
- talk to professional wildlife biologists about how you can help wildlife on your land, and possible funding opportunities.

Saturday, June 29, 2013

9:30 AM – 1:00 PM

FREE

Presentation (9:30-10:30)

Kittery Trading Post
301 U.S. Route One
Kittery, ME 03904

Site Visit (~11:30-1:00)

York Land Trust's
Highland Farm Preserve (directions will be provided—bring water, sunscreen, boots)

Target Audiences

Landowners in York County
Other interested landowners
Resource professionals

For more details, or to RSVP

Call Kelly Boland at (207) 646-9226 x 32 or email kelly\_boland@fws.gov.

Partnership with:

Special thanks to:

